Schlitz Beer is Good for You

The malt is a food; the hops a tonic. The alcohol—only 3 1/2 per cent—is an aid to digestion; a healthful stimulant.

Schlitz Beer is brewed with the extreme of cleanliness—cooled in filtered air—and every bottle is sterilized.

It is one of the best things in the world for you.

It does not ferment on the stomach, because it is aged—aged for months in refrigerating rooms before it is marketed.

It gives you beer without biliousness. Ask your doctor what he thinks about drinking Schlitz beer. Ask for the Brewery Bottling.

WEDDING PRESENTS

Six complete sets of dining-room furniture for a bride and groom who were not going to keep house. They found the articles dumped in the back yard of their boarding place the day after the wedding. Besides that they found chairs and dressing tables and chairs and couches and more chairs.

"That's what comes of being in the furniture business all my life. You see, most of my friends deal in this stuff," commented young Graham, ruefully, as he studied storage prices later in the day. "But your six sets of thanks for those dining-room sets are worth of art, Doty," he added. "I'm glad I've got you, if you do bring an avalanche of chairs and tables."

"Come, Rex, be sensible and help me now," rejoined the girl at the desk. "I've thanked people for every single thing except those spoons. Can't you decide who sent them? Try a process of elimination."

Graham drew down his brows. "They're nice solid ones."

"Very. Colonial pattern."

"They're from some of my relatives, of course."

"The only reason I think so is because mine are all represented—and yours aren't."

"What then, Doty?" You say they came from St. Louis? Why didn't the champagne send a card?"

"I'm deathly afraid they did. Those spoons came while I was dressing for the wedding and all I know is that the girls said they were postmarked St. Louis. If there was a card it was lost."

"Well, there are four families of my St. Louis relatives living there and not one of them sent anything."

"And there are those three lovely St. Louis girls I met at the last summer, too. I hadn't an idea of their giving me a present when I sent them an invitation, but what if they should have done it? I can't write, how awful that would be!"

"Well, I'll tell you what I'll do with the St. Louis spoons. I'll put them in a line like this: 'A checking of relatives who have made good on my list of wedding presents. I find you drew a blank. If there is any mistake about this kindly—'"

"Ridiculous! But, really, wait a minute. See what you think of this as a form that might be sent to each of them—varied a little, of course."

"Dear Grandpa: I have received a set of the loveliest spoons I ever saw, sent without any name, and I've been racking my brains to guess who could have sent them. Can it be possible that you could have done anything so generous and sweet?"

"No, Grandpa, not that exactly, but something like this: 'I never once dreamed of your being so lovely as to send me anything at all, much less—' No, not that either, of course, but wait—have it now: 'Can you help me to solve the mystery? Do give me a suggestion if you have an idea. How's that?'"

"Great land, Doty! Get it off quick and I'll write something along the same lines to my St. Louis people."

Four days later the morning mail brought the following letters—all from St. Louis:

"My Dear Nephew: It had slipped my mind that the 25th was your wedding day, and I'm glad your inquiry about the spoons reminded me. No, I didn't send them, but I am starting today a piece of cut glass, which I trust, will reach you safely. With all good wishes, your uncle."

"RICHARD STACKHOUSE"

"Dear Cousin: Yours received. I have no idea about the spoons you mention, but I am sending you a parlor lamp, which brings my congratulations, though it comes a little late. Devotedly."

"CLARA STACKHOUSE"

"Dear Rex, I'm not quite so sure about the spoons, and don't know who is, but I am quite of being very late in sending a remembrance for your wedding day. I enclose check for $15, which I should like to have you invest in a chair for your bride. I do it this way, because I have, being in the business, you can select better and get more for the money than I could. Your affectionate uncle."

"JOHN SEYMOUR"

"Dear Old Fellow: None of us sent the spoons, but if you see a big leather chair coming down the street you may know it came from all of us together. We have ordered it from Bradley's, in your town, and hope you'll like it. Congratulations and love from us all. Your cousin."

"BOB STACKHOUSE"

"Dear, Dear Dorothy: We three girls have had the greatest time trying to decide what to get for you and at last have hit upon the idea of ordering a big green damasked set. Here the one you need to sit on so much up of the lake last summer. It is very late in the day, but we just couldn't decide any sooner. With loads of love from us all."

"GLADYS"

"BERTHA"

"MARGARET"

"P. S.—We received your inquiries about the spoons. None of us knows a word about them."

Dorothy looked at Rex and Rex looked at Dorothy.

"Dorothy," he said, solemnly, "we've held up St. Louis."

"I should say we had!" she gasped. "And now, who sent those spoons?"

"Hate the spoons?" We won't ask another soul about them, that's one sure thing! Green damasked sets and leather chairs! I wonder what it would cost me to buy a storage warehouse outright!"—Chicago News.
